About Confidentiality:

Strictly confidential: These conversations are all confidential. Except in rare, extreme circumstances, nothing will be shared without your permission.

Mostly confidential: These conversations are kept as confidential as possible, but information about incidents of sexual misconduct must be shared with relevant administrators and the Title IX Coordinator so that the University can take action if necessary for reasons of safety. In planning any response, the wishes of the survivor or reporter are given full consideration.
What to do if a student tells you they were sexually assaulted:

In your conversation with the student:
First, be clear with the student that you will keep the conversation as confidential as you can, according to their wishes. If you are a Campus Security Authority (an official who has significant responsibility for student and campus activities), explain that role to the student so that they understand what you are obligated to report.

Make it clear to the student that the assault is not their fault. Don’t question or judge what was done to them, and be patient as they share what they need to say. Don’t ask too many questions – but be sure to ask about their safety (do they currently feel in danger, are they eating/sleeping/attending classes, etc.) and ask what they would like to do next. It is very likely that the student will not know what they want to do next, or they may change their mind several times. This is perfectly normal and understandable.

Talk to the student about support resources on and off campus, and encourage them to reach out to agencies that can support their physical and mental health. These resources are detailed at sa.uncg.edu/sexualassault. They include both strictly confidential and mostly confidential resources on and off campus.

It’s important that you refrain from offering your opinion on the path the student should take. The choice of how to handle their experience is theirs alone – your role is to provide support and information.
