How We Help Students Do Something Bigger Altogether
The Elliott University Center (EUC) is a key campus gathering place where friendships are formed, collaborative efforts are developed, ideas are brought to life, and students find support from professionals and peers.

Mission Statement
The Elliott University Center (EUC) serves as a welcoming hub of campus life for The University of North Carolina at Greensboro and enhances the collegiate experience for students by providing a venue for learning, entertainment, social interaction and opportunities for self-development. In addition to creating continuing educational and developmental opportunities for UNCG students through student employment, the EUC also houses programs and services that foster the development of an inclusive and diverse campus community. The EUC provides a secure and accessible physical environment for meetings, conferences, workshops, and staff development to students, faculty, staff, and the greater Greensboro community.

Points of Pride
- Public areas were updated with paint, graphics, and other elements to reflect UNCG Spartan Spirit.
- The EUC, in partnership with other campus offices, provided facilities and services for hundreds of thousands of individual students, staff, faculty and community members.
- The installation of a water hydration station has helped campus sustainability efforts by allowing students a convenient way to refill water bottles instead of purchasing and throwing away disposable bottles.
- EUC employees participated in a panel discussion with former student EUC employees and learned how the skills they are developing through their current employment will help them in their life after UNCG.

By the Numbers (2011-2012 Academic Year)
- The EUC made 4,381 reservations for student organization events.
- The doors to the EUC opened 2,028,367 times for students, faculty, staff and community members.
- Four blood drives were held, resulting in the collection of 1,287 productive units for the American Red Cross.
